NEWS & VIEWS OF PHILLIPS SINCE 1976 AUGUST 2014 • VOLUME 39, NUMBER 7

At 1314 East Franklin Avenue

Franklin Library 100 Years

This issue of The Alley Newspaper begins a series about a library-our Library. Albert Einstein tells us that "the only thing that you absolutely need to know, is the location of the library." Well then, that's easy; our Library is at 1314 East Franklin Avenue since 1914. Yes, 100 years of support by the community and of it supporting the community. See more about Franklin Library on page 5

The Phillips Neighborhood Clinic is moving!

Where: St. Paul's Lutheran Church at 2742 15th Avenue South Minneapolis, MN 55407

When: Mondays and Thursdays at 6:00 pm starting Monday, August 4th

As of Monday, July 21st the Phillips Neighborhood Clinic will no longer offer full medical services until the re-opening of the clinic on Monday, August 4th at our new location – St. Paul's Lutheran Church. During this two-week transitional period, the PNC will continue to offer medication refills, follow-up care, community health, and select lab services at our current location in the Oliver Christian Ministry Center.

We will officially close at Oliver Christian Ministry Center after clinic on Wednesday, July 30th. The clinic will then open at our new location at St. Paul's on Monday, August 4th and provide full medical services. At our new location, the PNC will operate on Mondays and Thursdays from 6-9 pm. Note the change in weekdays, as the PNC has traditionally been open on Monday and Wednesday evenings.

We look forward to seeing you at the new PNC!

Franklin Community Library has been a gathering place for new immigrants and lifelong learners since 1914 at 1314 East Franklin Avenue and before that at a rented space nearby. In its early years it featured a large Scandinavian collection, as the community was heavily populated with newcomers from Denmark, Norway and Sweden.

Today, the surrounding neighborhoods are home to people from all ethnicities and walks of life, including many who are learning English as a second language. To meet the needs of its diverse users, Franklin Library's World Language collection focuses on materials in Somali and Spanish. Adult Learning materials and a large American Indian collection are also featured at Franklin. The library complex includes the Phillips Technology Center and the Franklin Learning Center, and a popular afterschool homework help program.

The Franklin renovation combines preservation of historic features with updated technology to create a library learning environment for people of all ages. New elements include a children's pavilion and storybook room to welcome young visitors, an area designed especially for teens, comfortable seating in front of the two historic fireplaces, and a community meeting room. In addition to a collection of books, media, and magazines for children, teens, and adults, more than thirty new computers are available for public

Franklin Library Building Facts:

- The oldest of three existing Andrew Carnegie funded Libraries in Minneapolis and one of 66 in Minnesota.
- Is on the National Registry of Historic Places and has Minneapolis Historic Preservation Commission status.
- Was closed in 2004 for renovation designed by Meyer, Scherer & Rockcastle Architects but maintained reduced operation next door on Franklin Avenue.
- Had a Grand Reopening May 7, 2005.
- Library Collection is on the main level; multipurpose room, computer lab, and literacy center on lower level; 13,000 sq. ft.

Special Features

- Children's pavilion
- Franklin Learning Center est.1988.
- Phillips Technology Center est. 1997

VENTURA VILLAGE NEWS

VENTURA MEANS HAPPINESS & GOOD LUCK TO YOU! BUENA VENTURA!

There will be no Ventura Village General Membership Meeting for the month of August, 2014!

But please come visit us during our community events this summer where we can all meet!

Ventura Village is set for two big events this Summer: PV PARK Festival and Open Streets

Ventura Village's new language interpreter passes on

Although we had only hired Abdulrahman Adem for two short months to provide interpretation services to our Somali residents, he had already demonstrated a level of skill and professionalism rarely seen today. Mr. Adem would show up and in ten minutes would have his entire equipment kit ready to go for those entering the room. We had spent more than a year trying to assemble a kit like his with hardly the knowledge to do so. Here is how Ibrihim Hirsi memorialized Adem:

"The Twin Cities Somali community has lost an esteemed leader and a passionate advocate for Somali families. Abdulrahman Adem, a cultural facilitator at Minneapolis Public Schools (MPS), died Sunday of a heart attack. He was 58.

Adem was known for his commitment to serve Somali families with students in Minneapolis schools as their ultimate ambassador in the school district. He was also known for his commitment to help his immigrant community navigate the district's complicated educational system and find the resources they needed.

Adem, who worked at MPS since 1997, held various posts in the district: bilingual program aide, associate educator, bilingual communicator, translator and communications and public affairs specialist.

Adem was a wise man and true champion of those who are underserved and often invisible. "I'm getting old and I know I won't be around for too long," Adem once told me. "But I want to leave a legacy for the young generation: To stand up and be a voice for the voiceless."

A graduate from the Somali National University in Mogadishu, Adem served in the public sector of Somalia for decades. He played a vital role in developing the written Somali language. After escaping the Somali civil war, Adem arrived in the United States in 1992. Today Adem is no more, but his legacy will live on for many years. The news of his death Sunday morning [July 18th] has shaken the Twin Cities Somali community.

First Minneapolis Library start-up money donor, Dr. Kirby Spencer, trusted and cared for by Armstrong English

Dr. Kirby Spencer, one of Minneapolis' first dentists, is generally credited with providing the money to start Minneapolis' Athenaeum* which functioned as the city's first public library. Eventually the Athenaeum evolved into the Minneapolis Public Library and more recently into the Hennepin County Library. His was one of the early burials in Pioneers and Soldiers Cemetery and even though he was later disinterred and reburied at Lakewood, he remains one of the cemetery's most written about residents. Another man, Armstrong English, who most likely has never been written about, took care of Spencer in the weeks and months before he died. English and two of his infant sons, both infants, are still buried in Pioneers and Soldiers Cemetery.

Spencer, a private and very eccentric man, fell ill in the early months of 1870. As his health began to fail, he became increasingly reclusive, living "a sort of hermits [sic] life" in his office where a few friends occasionally visited him. The Minneapolis Tribune said: "By some unknown cause he seemed to have become soured at the world, and seldom if ever took anyone into his confidence, and never, that we know of, told any of his secrets, so that it is not known where he is from, only that he formerly lived in Florida, or whether he was ever married, nor anything, in fact about his past history. As his illness progressed, there was one person who he could count on: Armstrong English.

English was born in either Kentucky or Missouri. He was African-American and details about the date and place of his birth are, as they were for many African-Americans born before the Civil War, unclear. Missouri was most often named as his birthplace and estimates of his birth year ranged from 1830 to 1839. In the 1870 Federal Census, his age was given as 40, but ten years later the 1880 census lists his age as 41. In the 1885 Territorial Census, his age was given as 49. When he died three years later, in 1888, records indicate that he was still 49. Whenever and wherever English was born, he was living in Minnesota as early as August 1869 when R. J. Mendenhall and his wife, Abby, members of the city's Quaker community, gave him a parcel of land valued at Spencer died on March 10, 1870, from tuberculosis. In 1872 English took the executors of Dr. Spencer's estate to court because they had only allowed $94.50 to pay him for services rendered. Armstrong asked for $325 that he felt that he was due and also to be repaid $27 that he had loaned to Dr. Spencer. The judge more or less split the difference and granted English $1 per day for service "up to a certain time," after which the judge ruled he was entitled to $2 a day. Since English had no proof that he had loaned $27 to Spencer, that claim was disallowed. He received $213 plus the interest that had accumulated during the two years since Spencer had died.

In April 1873, Armstrong married Caroline (Carrie) Roth. She was at least 15 years younger than her husband and was well known around town for her quick temper. Theirs was an inter-racial marriage, something of a rarity for Minneapolis in the 1870s, and while they had many loyal friends in the community, they also had plenty of detractors. That disapproval coupled with Carrie's quick temper resulted in the couple spending a fair amount of time in court. With one exception, it was Carrie who was arrested, not her husband. The papers never reported what it was that prompted her to use "insulting and indecent language," but given the pattern of harassment against them in the days after their marriage, it isn't hard to imagine.

Eventually, things seem to have settled down. English, was well regarded, described in the Minneapolis Tribune as a "good natured and hard working man." He worked for the City of Minneapolis as a chimney sweep. In addition to the two sons that they lost, they had at least two other sons and one daughter. The family lived at 2532 14th Avenue South (currently an empty lot).

Armstrong English is buried in an unmarked grave in Lot 23, Block T, in the SW 1/4. His children are buried in the Potter's Field.

Still Empty, After All These Years!

BY ROBERT ALBEE

City Pages published an Erin Carlyle piece on September 9th in 2009 featuring me standing in an empty pool complaining about the Minneapolis Parks & Recreation Board allowing the Phillips Community Center (PCC) building to close and residents also losing access to the only indoor swimming pool in the community. Although the story was about "redlining" and inequities in Park Board spending allocations, the PCC pool itself still stands empty. This despite the fact that the building itself reopened three years ago.

A non-profit, Minneapolis Swims took the initiative and agreed with the Park Board, that it would raise the necessary capital to rebuild the pool and oversee its operations in service to the community. During the next few years, various proposals were assembled suggesting three options, ranging from a $2.5 million rebuild to a $8.5 million total redevelopment that would include two pools and a specialized diving well.

At its July, 16th meeting, the Administration & Finance Committee of the Minneapolis Park & Recreation Board (MPRB) voted to approve Resolution 2014-250 which read: "Resolution Authorizing Actions to Proceed with Development of the Phillips Community Center Aquatic Facility with the Intention the the MPRB Will Construct and Operate the Facility Upon the Commitment and Board of Commissioners Acceptance of Necessary Capital Funds by March 31, 2015." The significance of this approved motion is that the Park Board has moved toward actually operating the swimming pool upon completion of construction, instead of contracting with Minneapolis Swims so handle the daily operations.

Through Different Eyes

In this part of the world, we are fortunate to have The Circle, a paper which elevates Native Americans while stifling racism and chauvinism in general. It was not so long ago that I communicated with Ricey Wild to commend her column "It Ain't Easy Being Indian." Her words, so often packed with meaning, are a reflection of personal experience. Do see the June issue for the context of the following quotation.

"I understand now how we the oppressed were with evil intent told to oppress other non-whites so we kept fighting against each other rather than organizing to make null and void our common adversary – White people. I sincerely apologize to people whom I have never met whose culture I degraded. I truly did not know but when I did learn I stopped that behavior and became interested and respectful of others' human experiences and history... When I say or write White people I mean the culture of greed and hate they cultivate."

I will disagree here with Ricey's reference to "White people" as the "cultivators" of greed and hate. My thinking flows from history more so than from personal experience.

Bear in mind that the ancestors of all people were communal hunter gatherers. Without exception we were "communists" for some 100,000 years! It is only in recent time that the development of agriculture allowed for the social stratification from which evolved a ruling class, and an organized state apparatus to enforce a system of exploitation (i.e. slavery). Moreover, it is abundantly clear that the prevailing ideology under any system of exploitation (i.e. slavery, feudalism, capitalism) is the ideology of the ruling class.

In today's world it is the capitalist class which cultivates the various forms of chauvinism. Whereas, the white working class exhibits a tendency to be a carrier. I believe this is an important distinction.

We should recognize, as well, that capitalism inadvertently promotes the opposite tendency via

Is 60's Co-op Vision Blurred?

"...Empty ya pockets son, they got you thinkin' that What ya need is what they sellin' Make you think that buyin' is rebellin'..."*

BY FRANK ERICKSON

Let's be clear about one thing; the true working poor, the unemployed poor, and poor people do not shop at our local co-op food

Seward Co-op is on steroids. Just slow down! I remember shopping at Seward Co-op in 1992, when it was in the little store front that is now Welna Hardware II on East Franklin Avenue and 21st Street. It was a cute little store. Now Seward Co-op is expanding again on 38th Street next to 35W. They have hired professional smooth talkers to sell their expansion plan to the public. Is this what the original "hole-inthe-wall" food co-op starers from the 60's and 70"s envisioned?-coops that look like Lund's spread-the amalgamation of the various

ing out over the landscape?

There is a lot of talk about equality and very little talk about reality. Seward Co-op can go on and on about their mission to bring healthy food to inner city people, but the reality is that poor people cannot afford to shop at Seward Co-op or the Wedge Co-op because they are too expensive. In South Minneapolis the poor shop at Cub Foods and [Aldis] on Lake Street or Franklin.

Organic or non-organic does not matter when you are poor. Price is all that matters when you are poor. The Wedge Co-op and Seward Co-op are crazy expensive compared to Cub and [Aldis]. At he Co-op stores you cannot get a box of cereal for less than five bucks. A three pound bag of apples is an amazing $8.99!

The cheapest bulk apple price is $3.99 a pound which is more than double that of Cub or [Aldis]. The cheapest can of black beans at the Co-ops is $1.59 compared to 69 cents at Cub. POOR PEOPLE CANNOT AFFORD CO-OP PRICES!

So just what is Seward Co-op's mission in bringing a new store to South Minneapolis? Obviously it is not bringing healthy food to poor inner city people. What is the Co-op seeking to gain? A new store will not benefit poor people! Who will gain? Who will benefit? The reality is that it will cause gentrification of the area!

Discussion prior to the vote demonstrated that there is still wide division on the part of both Board Members and Park Board staff as to the viability of the pool. With requirements that such a facility be managed for the next twenty years after opening to the public, several Board members feared that it would become a drain of resources and given the target population, become unable to be financially sustained. Although the proposals suggested contracted facility usage to Augsburg College and the Minneapolis Public Schools, other Board members feared that it could be built and then in order to manage the facility, there would be little time made available to the actual neighborhood residents and stakeholders for whom the facility is being rebuilt. The committee approval still must go before the full MPRB for approval.

Now is the time for the four neighborhoods of the Phillips Community to convene a series of meetings in conjunction with Minneapolis Swims and other interested parties to better address strategies that could make it more possible to sustain the operations of a aquatic facility in the Phillips Community Center. This would entail both a financial commitment and an effort to assure sufficient usage to keep the facility operating in the black.

The big empty pool at the Phillips Community Center is a strong reminder that a great deal of hard work and good will must be expended before water will enable the joy of splashing about by children, adults, elders and competitive swimmers that we have been holding out hope for these many years! Let's get busy, all of us!

Backyard Initiative Circle of Healing CHAT: Our Vision

BY DR. MICHELE SEMERIT STRACHAN

The Circle of healing is a gathering of people who all feel they received a special calling and transmission of knowledge/wisdom to heal. We are on a path to which we are called. The ultimate authority on our work is the calling. The ultimate development is our deepening communication with the calling.

All illness is the resistance to the calling, the holding on to anything that will protect us from the total dissolution of self that Oneness with Calling requires. If all illness is a resistance, if all healing is a reconciliation with self, with the Creator, and with the blueprint for life and evolution, then what is the role of the healer?

In the African tradition, the teacher is the student and the student is the teacher. The healer is a mirror for the patient; AND the patient is a mirror for the healer. In this way, everyone has a healing role to play. And the intended healing that an illness calls for occurs best in community.

As someone specifically called to the healing path, we each have a role that is specifically patterned on the joys, the trauma, and the awfulness of our specific lives. We are called simultaneously to go deeply into the particulars of our life AND to disappear from the encounter so that Spirit or the Creative Force may move through the aligned and clear opening we have become to touch directly the BE-ing who is seeking, through us, a greater alignment with the Creator's plan for his/her life.

In the Circle of Healing, we explore what are the structures and institutions that can best support the development of practitioners who really embody that the healing comes from the patient, what are the best ways to recreate community that heals, and how do we collectively reclaim becoming the authority on community cultural healing of our own people.

BYI Out In the Backyard CHAT Healing Circle

BY LEILA SARENE AND HARRY FORD

BYI Community Health Action Teams or CHATS, Circle of Healing and Out In the Backyard, together with the Cultural Wellness Center have partnered to create community healing space. The primary goal is to provide opportunities to members of the LGBTQ community and their allies to build knowledge and practices related to understanding the healing power of community connection. For healing to take place, the group is discovering each person must begin to create space for trusting relationships.

The group began its process with uncovering the collective understanding of what it means to trust. Trust is a critical element in the function of community. When people are able to trust themselves and one another, growth is possible. As we examined how each person viewed trust it became clear that a lack of trust contributes to the fear and isolation that is present for many of the circle members. Healing began with using the space to share with each other our of our visions. vulnerabilities and strengths.

Together, the circle members are building a picture of where they are headed towards feeling whole. The circle is working on understanding the role each person plays in the function of community and how this impacts their own growth and development. Each person is a critical piece to the reality of the community being built through a collective unfolding of wisdom and understanding related to the collective realization

The circle is gathering together, each person seeking self in the reflection of one another's truths, stories and wisdoms. Gathering together is a helpful reminder to each person that we are not alone. Community is built on trusting what each person carries on the inside ourselves. This trust also requires each person face what might appear to be most uncomfortable in ourselves and in those

The Out In the Backyard

Healing Circle members are journeying toward knowledge of self. The Circle is learning to give of self to one another creates space for the greatest level of shared humanity. It is this shared humanity that gives this circle power to create space to heal and be transformed.
